

Filling the data gap

 Data journalism across continents

Quick bio

I'm a computer scientist and data journalist from Italy, working between Europe and Africa since 2011.

I collaborated with the Pulitzer Center, European Journalism Center, ICFJ and a number of international organizations.

Now I work at Code for Africa, where I lead the Data programs.

The human and financial cost of 15 years of Fortress Europe

The Migrants Files was a consortium of journalists from over 15 European countries. It was coordinated by Journalism++.

 Winner, Data Journalism Awards 2014
 Winner, European Press Prize 2015

The Migrants Files

A cross-european data journalism project on migrants' deaths and the business of migration in the EU (trailer).

Filters

Vessel

- Aquarius
- Argos
- Dignity I
- Phoenix
- Prudence

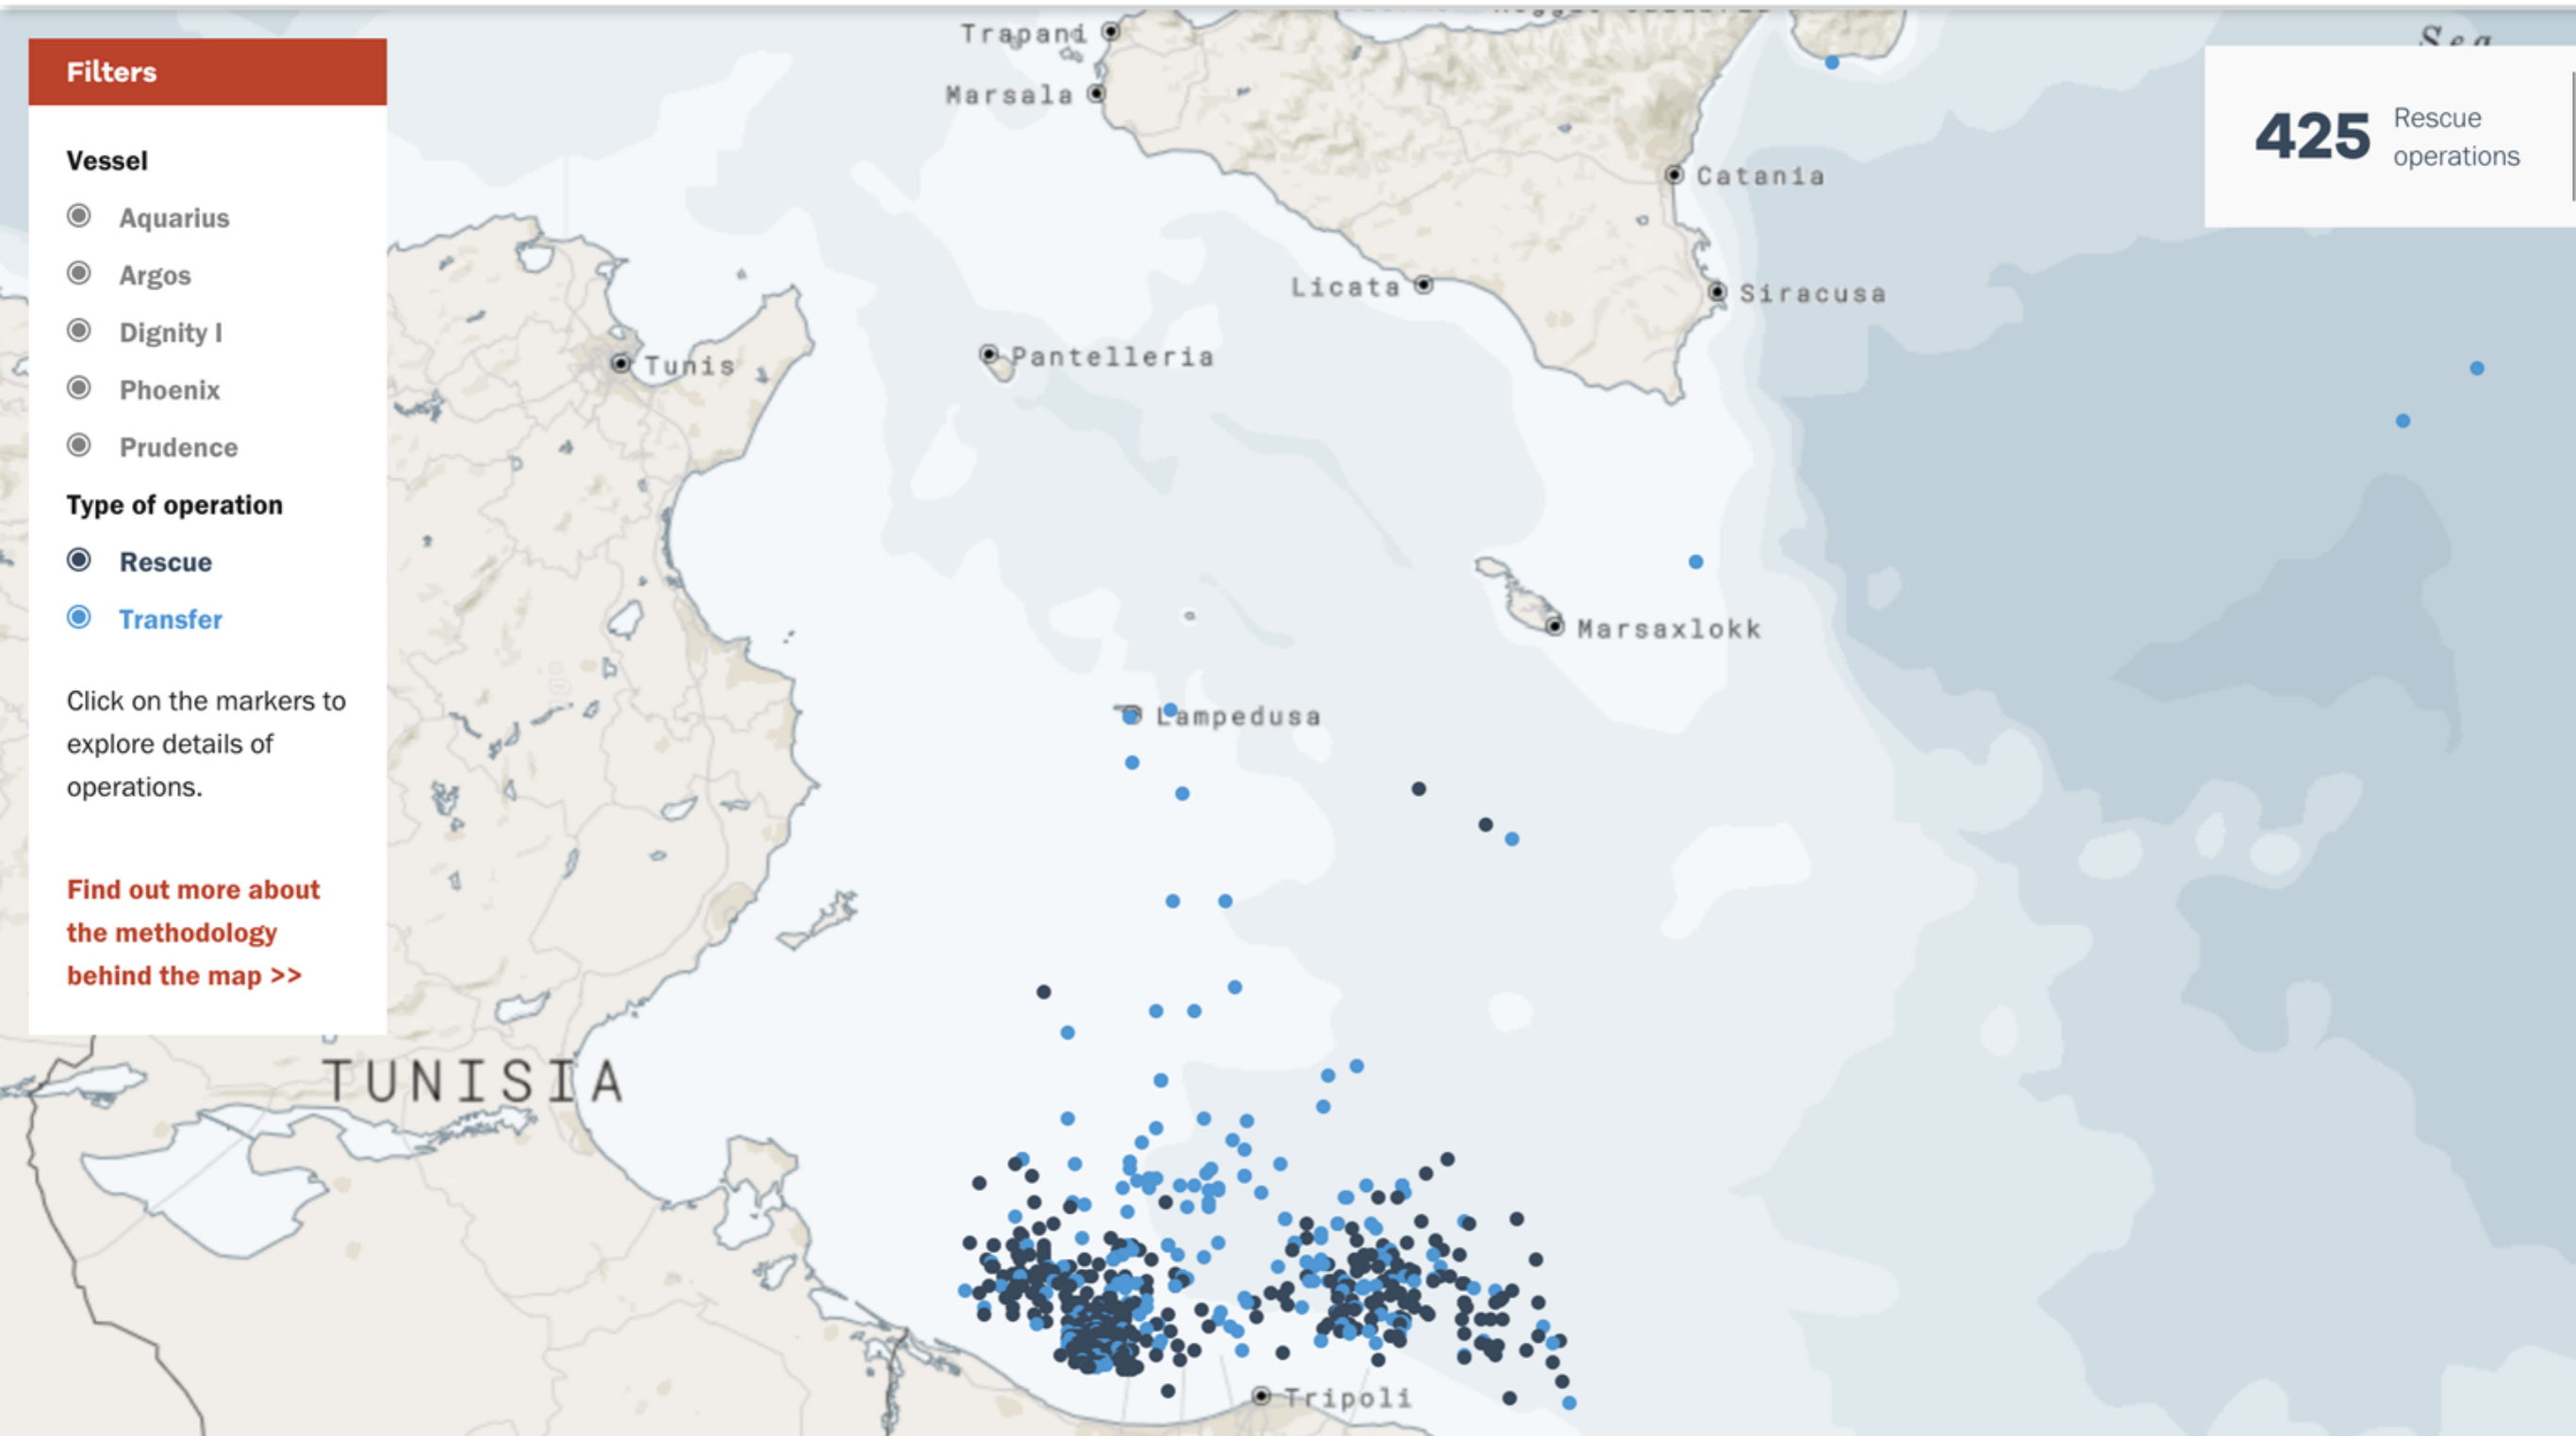

Type of operation

- Rescue
- Transfer

Click on the markers to explore details of operations.

Find out more about the methodology behind the map >>

425 Rescue operations

Search and Rescue

Open data portal to map and visualize all the SAR operations led by Médecins Sans Frontières in the Mediterranean Sea.

InfoNile

We have collaborated on projects like InfoNile to tackle water security and climate change issues in the Nile Basin region.

InfoNile, a geo-journalism open data platform to uncover water security issues in the Nile Basin region.

Site: InfoNile.org

Twitter: @InfoNile

Lungs of the Earth A data-driven journey across the rainforests in the world.
Read more: bit.ly/lungs-aje

Source: UnequalScenes.com

AfricanDRONE.org: visualizing inequality with drones

MapMakoko

HOTOSM, Pulitzer Center and CfA are mapping a slum in Lagos using drones and involving the local community

MapMakoko

Filling the map gap with local communities in Lagos, Nigeria. Featured on Urbanet:
<http://bit.ly/mapmakoko>

Thank you! 🖱️

Find me on Twitter/LinkedIn: @JacopoOttaviani

