- Our mandate includes:
  - protecting health, safety, security and the environment
  - implementing Canada's international commitments
  - disseminating objective information to the public

Lee Casterton

He/Him

Lee has worked for the Canadian Nuclear Safety Commission (CNSC) since 2008 in various fields including: environmental assessments (EA), health science, power reactor regulation, and regulatory affairs.

Lee is currently the director of the Regulatory Framework Division (RFD). RFD is responsible for maintaining the CNSC's regulatory framework, which consists of the Nuclear Safety and Control Act, associated regulations, and regulatory documents.

Tessa Henley

She/Her

Tessa has worked for the CNSC since November 2021. She started as an analyst in the President's Office prior to becoming a policy officer in the International and Government Affairs division, affording her a unique bird's eye view of the organization.

Before joining the CNSC, Tessa gained experience working at the Senate of Canada, Global Affairs Canada and Indigenous Services Canada.

Tessa has a Master's Degree in Public Policy and Administration from Carleton and completed her undergraduate studies at the University of Toronto. In her spare time, Tessa enjoys hiking and watching Formula racing.

Matthew Naraine

He/Him

Matthew is a public servant and professional engineer working with the Canadian Nuclear Safety Commission's Directorate of Advanced Reactor Technologies on new nuclear programs.

As a Young Professionals Network Co-Chair and member of the CNSC Diverse Employee Network, his goal is to elevate the CNSC employee experience and grow the next generation of nuclear safety leaders.

Outside of work, Matthew enjoys training in the martial arts and discovering new restaurants in Ottawa.

Jessica Beaudry

She/Her

Jessica Beaudry has been with the Canadian Nuclear Safety Commission (CNSC) since 2017.

She is currently in the International and Government Affairs Division as a Senior International Relations Officer, working to improve gender balance in the nuclear sector.
