Coming Soon for Executives

International Podcast Series

More than ever, the Covid-19 crisis and current events across the globe are forcing governments to quickly adapt their policies and how they provide services to their citizens.

Listen to the Global anecdotes in a pandemic world podcast to hear from international leaders on their innovative and forward-thinking approaches to dealing with the challenges brought about by the global pandemic.

ADM Forum

Organized by the Canada School of Public Service in partnership with the ADM Learning Advisory Committee, the ADM Forum is the learning event of the year for the assistant deputy minister (ADM) community.

Interactive and conversation-based, this annual event is an ideal opportunity to hear from, and ask questions to, high-profile speakers.

The next ADM Forum will take place in 2021. Stay tuned to hear more about this highly anticipated event.

Canada's Arctic National Security and the Implications of Climate Change

The impacts of climate change are vast and varied. One such issue, melting permafrost and ice, is doing more than wreaking havoc on local wildlife and communities. In its path it leaves a changing Arctic coastline that begs the question: How is our national security adapting to this ever shifting landscape? This event is designed to provide public servant executives with a broader knowledge of national security issues facing the Arctic by highlighting:

- how climate change is affecting our Arctic defenses
- growth in shipping lanes and greater access to natural resources
- remaining collaborative internationally and with Arctic communities and treaty partners in northern Canada

Join us for a discussion between panelists on the future of Canada's Arctic national security. Panelists will deliberate on how climate change is affecting Arctic landscape and what that means for our national security in the north. A forum will be made available for the audience to ask questions. This event is the part one to a two-part series.

Getting it Right: Are Arctic Collaboration and Foreign Policy Strategies Drivers of Social and Economic Prosperity in the North?

It is inevitable, we are already seeing the impacts of climate change in the Canadian Arctic and around the world. With this comes potential to build new and strengthen existing economies by opening up shipping lanes, encouraging tourism, or accessing a plethora of natural resources once kept hidden by the ice. But where does this leave us on a global stage, and, how do we make sure that Canada and its northern communities benefit from this burgeoning source of prosperity? This event is designed to provide public servant executives with a broader understanding of the social and economic growth potential in the Arctic through policy and collaboration by focusing on:

- how Canada can be prepared nationally and internationally
- collaborating with the Arctic 8 and indigenous communities and treaty partners in the Arctic
- Canada's response to other countries seeking "a piece of the pie"

Join us for a panel discussion focusing on Canadian Arctic prosperity. This exchange of ideas will highlight the factors influencing social conditions and economic prosperity in the Arctic, with a specific focus on linkages to foreign policy and relationships with other Arctic nations. A forum will be made available for the audience to ask questions. This event is the second portion of a two-part series.
